Campfire Nourishment

What do a chainsaw and a bacon-wrapped roast made over a campfire have in common? Both were important parts of Camp Metigoshe wood split weekend 2011. The weekend of October 7 former camp staff, along with friends of Metigoshe, stayed in the Lee House for a weekend full of tree cutting, wood splitting, food eating and belly laughing good times!

Split wood is used for campfires where campers and staff alike come together to be nourished. Campfires nourish bodies with a delicious snack or keep us warm and clean when burning in the sauna. Campfires nourish minds with good conversation around a fire while camping out under the stars. Campfires nourish souls with music, dancing and hearing the Word through skits at an all-camp campfire. Campfires are a major part of how we are nourished at camp.

Thanks to all the volunteers for caring for camp and 'nourishing' all who experience a Camp Metigoshe campfire.

Volunteers were productive and hauled many pickup loads of split wood. After their hard work, they enjoyed food and fellowship in the Lee House Retreat Center.
